PM to give okay to Har Homa

Approval may be linked to March pullback

By DAVID MAKOVSKY

Prime Mioister Bioyamin Netanyahu will give the go-ahead to begin building at Har Homa in southeastern Jerusalem in the next couple of weeks, a senior official told The Jerusalem Post yesterday, in what may be part of an implicit deal involving the IDF pullback from the West Bank scheduled for March 7.

"The announcement of the prime minister to build on Har Homa will occur in a week or two," the official said. He added that it is soll unclear bow many of the originally planned 6,500 units will be constructed on the land, located between Ramat Rachel and the Arab village of Sur Bahir.

While denying that the timing of Har Homa is linked to the scheduled Israeli pullback, the official gave no other reason why the announcement is being delayed. Other sources said Israel's discretion in designating the scope of the March 7 pullback gives the government leverage to discuss some sort of deal.

These sources denied, however, that Israel would consult with Palestinian Authority leader Yasser Arafat about the construcoon at Har Homa. But, the sources ter, but so far bas not turned up said, for such a deal to be acceptable to the Palestinians, the US would have to offer its backing.

Netanyahu, responding to jour-nalists' questions yesterday on the controversy raging over claims further construction in eastern Jerusalem would be delayed, said, "I am simply amazed at what I am hearing here. Apparently somebody is trying to make headlines over oothing.

"Is there anyone here who does not intend to build and pave roads in, or develop Jerusalem? There is no argument here," he said. The Ministerial Committee on

Jerusalem is to meet today to discuss key issues. According to officials in the Prime Minister's Office and elsewhere, the panel "will very likely" decide to close five to six Palestinian institutions in the city that Israel says are linked to the PA, and as such constitute a violation of the Oslo

The list has been drawn up in cooperation with the State Attorney's Office, sources said, to ensure that the closures could withstand a petidon to the High Court of Justice.

The US is investigating the mat-hard evidence that the institutions are PA bodies.

The panel may also discuss the paving of new roads in the Jerusalem area, including the so-called "ring road" in the eastern part of the city and Route 45, which leads into the city from the north. Some believe the roads may be approved today, but this is uncertain, as some ministers have not yet received the relevant material.

US officials said that during Netanyahu's White House meeting with President Bill Clinton last week, the premier raised the Har Homa issue as a general problem relating to coalidon pressures, but "no permission was asked [to build] nor was it granted" by the US. US officials did, however, say they feared any act that would undercut US efforts to win regional support for Israel in the aftermath of the Hebron deal.

US officials pointedly refused to say whether they thought that what they call a "credible, rather than merely a symbolic pullback" on March 7 would be sufficient to quiet Arab protests about Har Homa.

The US told Netanyahu last week that it favors Israel yielding up to 10 percent of the West Bank in the March 7 pullback, Israeli officials said. But it remains unclear whether this means transferring territory from Israeli control (Area C) to partial Palestinian control (Area B), or portions of Area B to territory completely under Palesunian control (Area A).

It has been reported that Israel is expected to yield 2 percent of the West Bank. Arafat is bound to want more.

Palestinian legislator Ahmed Batash said a decision to build at Har Homa could trigger Palestinian riots like those of last September. which claimed the lives of 61 Palestinians and 15 Israelis.

"It will lead to events like the opening of the [Western Wall] tun-nel in September which had difficult consequences for both peoples, Israelis and Palestinians," he said.

General Security Service head Ami Ayalon has warned the cabinet that a decision to build at Har Homa could lead to a "difficult reaction" by the Palestinians, cabinet-level sources said.

Ministers known to favor building in Har Homa are Avigdor Kahalani, Natan Sharansky, Zevulun Hammer, Yitzhak Levy, Ariel Sharon, Yuli Edelstein, Eli Suissa, Lmior Livnat and Rafael

J'lem construction debate rages on

By LIAT COLLINS

MK Ze'ev Begin (Likud) yesterday agreed to change the title of his urgent motion to the agenda in the Knesset from "Netanyahu is Dividing Jerusalem" to "The Dangers of Dividing Jerusalem." The motion is expected to be discussed in the plenum tomorrow.

Begin changed the wording after meeong with the Likud faction leaders, who called on him to make the motion less personal. "What's important now is to unite io the coalioon against the demands by the Arabs," said faction chairman Michael Eitan said.

After the meeting Begin told reporters: "The Likud faccion execuove agreed with me that there is a danger that Jerusalem will be divided and that one of the dangers that should be raised among the public and in the Knesset is the activities of the PLO and Jibril Rajoub's security service in Jerusalem. In the last couple of weeks we have been witnessing a serious deterioration in Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's diplomatic policies."

Begin also criocized the prime minister for not sticking by his promise to insist on reciprocity from the Arabs.

MK Alex Lubotsky (Third Way) last night announced that he had gained the signatures of 40 MKs necessary to oblige the prime minister to appear before the Knesset plenum to clarify bis policy on building in Jerusalem.

The Labor faction, meanwhile, decided against filing a oo-confidence mooon over the premier's stalling on the Har Homa project to Jerusalem, as faction chairman Ra'anan Cohen

Several Labor MKs noted the partnership with the far-right that would result if Labor went ahead with the no-confidence motion. Labor issued a statement at the end of the meeting stating: "The Labor Party's stand on Jerusalem was always clear and unequivocal eignty is indivisible although freedom of worship for all religious must be preserved." But Ehud Barak, who is also vying for the Labor leadership, rejected Beilin's idea of postponing the issue unof the talks on the permanent arrangements saying: "It was not incidental that we decided not to discuss the Jerusalem

- that a united Jerusalem under Israeli soverissue with the Palestinians." Our stand is clear - We must build in Har Homa. The oming is a matter for the government to decide," Barak said.

Meretz leader Yossi Sarid said he would support Netanyahu if he refrains from building in Har Homa and in Ras el-Amud.

He attacked the Labor factioo's approach saying: "The Labor Party must understand that the opposition is not always a matter of playing off old grudges and certainly not playing with fire.

Building in Har Homa and Ras el-Amud will cause a conflagration in Jerusalem which will burn down the last bridges between the Jews and Arabs in the city and cause the collapse of its status as Israel's capital," Sarid

In a plenum debate on related motions yesterday Deputy Housing and Construction Minister Meir Porush (United Torah Judaism) said his ministry is ready to start construction on the Har Homa project the minute it receives the necessary approval from the government.

Harel called for construction to begin immediately at Har Homa, Givat Hamatos, on the eastern "ring road" around Jerusalem, the Jerusalem-Ma'aleh Adumim strip and Route No. 45 entering the city from the north.

"It is very hard to imagine how this government can continue if it fails the Jerusalem test," Harel said.

The National Religious Party, in its weekly faction meeong, demanded that the prime minister immediately approve the construction in

Settlers council joins struggle over Jerusalem

A formal decision to join the struggle over "Greater Jerusalem" was made at an executive council meeting held by the Council of Jewish Settlements in Judea, Samaria and Gaza

According to council spokesman Yechiel Leiter the decision means that the council will become more publicly involved in issues concerning building in Jerusalem, such as the planned Har Homa neighborhood.

"There will be more activity on the streets," he said adding that the council had debated for some months whether to become involved in issues concerning Jerusalem. Grapes of Wrath monitors end deliberations

SLA positions come under heavy mortar attack

By DAVID RUDGE and news agencies

The Grapes of Wrath monitoring group concluded its deliberations yesterday on complaints by Israel and Lebanon over breaches of the understandings that ended the battles last April, as fighting continued in the security zone.

Reports from Lebanoo said the committee, composed of representatives from America, France. Israel, Syria and Lebanon, once again called on the sides involved in the conflict to avoid endangering civilians.

Israel had complained about an incident two weeks ago in which Hizbuliah had planted a chain of five explosive devices alongside a house in Beit Leif in the zone, which were discovered before they were detonated. The understandings ban attacks inside or firing from villages or public facilities.

Lebanon complained to the group over the IAF raids last week on a Hizbullah-run radio station in the Bekaa Valley, in which two houses were damaged. Both sides maintained that the activities had endangered civilians.

The IDF Spokesman issued a statement last night, saying the monitoring group had determined that five explosive devices were planted in Beit Leif. Israel's representative to the committee insisted that the bombs had been planted by Hizbullah and had endangered civilians in the village.

The statement said the committee had agreed that during the course of the IAF strike on the

Peres: Syrians didn't meet our demands

By HILLEL KUTTLER

WASHINGTON - Labor Party leader Shimon Peres suggested in a speech in Washington Sunday night that as prime minister last year, he had agreed to return the entire Golan Heights but did not receive sufficient Syrian assurances on the quality of peace. Peres told the annual gathering of the National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council that Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Shara has maintained that Peres and former premier Yitzhak Rabin were offering to withdraw from the entire Golan.

"So he was asked by the Arabs: 'Why didn't you sign the peace, if this is the case?" which is a legitimate question." Peres said. "The answer was: We have requests of our own. We would like to be sure that when somebody says land-forpeace, we shall get the peace, not only them getting the land. And on that, we have not only the right but the duty to insist."

The Israeli-Palestinian civil affairs committee started talks yesterday aimed at resolving remaining interim issues, focusing on environmental matters and establishing a timetable for negotianions.

Ministry Environment Director-General Nehama Ronen raised the matter of sewage disposal in Jenin and Hebron and offered a budget of NIS 80 million to solve this through joint processing plants. Ronen also complained about a planned flour mill in Gaza, but the Palestinians said they would use filters to cut the dust emission.

Beit She'an factory remains closed despite new orders

By DAVID RUDGE

The Beit She an Engines factory in the unemployment-stricken development town remained closed yesterday and its 35 workers on the dole, despite promises by the Defense Ministry to increase orders to the plant.

The factory, which overhauls engines of IDF vehicles, was shut two weeks ago due to insufficient orders and the employees were later issued dismissal notices. Demonstrations at the plant and subsequently opposite the Knesset brought about the intervention of Foreign Minister David Levy, himself a Beit She'an resident.

An agreement was reached with Minister Yitzhak Mordechai that additional orders would be given to the factory to save the workers' jobs.

The ministry issued a statement yesterday saying that it had placed orders for 246 engines to be overhauled and refurbished by the factory - 71 of them in the past two weeks. The announcement said Mordechai had informed Histadrut chairman Amir Peretz of the decision to increase orders to the factory in coordination with its management and the chairman of the firm's board of directors. The latter are due to meet the Defense Ministry director-general next week. Furthermore, the statement said that it was Mordechai's policy to do everything possible to maintain the size and number of work orders to factories in development towns, despite budget cuts.

Beit She'an Histadrut branch chairman Pinni Kabalo maintained, however, that the orders were still not enough to keep the factory fully employed. Kabalo said the workers were officially classed as unemployed because they had received dismissal notices and management still intended to remove equipment and sell off its machines unless more orders were forthcoming. He maintained that the engines received for overhaul so far from the ministry were sufficient to keep the factory employed on a regular basis for two weeks, and the entire order of 246 motors for several months, but not longer. The workers plan to demonstrate opposite the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv tomorrow.

reduce heart disease risk

A hormone used experimentally to treat a locally discovered type of genetically transmitted dwarfism has been found to have additional properties that can reduce one of the important risk factors in cardiovascular diseases.

The discovery, published in the journal Metabolism, was made by Prof. Zvi Laron, one of the world's leading pediatric endocrinologists. of Tel Aviv University and the Schneider Children's Medical Center of Israel (SCMCI) in Petah Tikva. The dwarfism was named for Laron in 1972, one of only two diseases named for an Israeli, Laron not only conducted research into it, but also discovered the cause and developed a treatment for it.

The drug he uses experimentally to treat Laron syndrome is insulinlike growth factor (IGF-I), a hormone produced by the liver which causes growth hormone produced by the pinutary gland to trigger growth of the bones and tissues.

It was first synthesized in 1986; three years later. Laron and his team were the first to use it for treating patients with the syn-drome. The drug, manufactured for clinical studies in small quantities but not yet available on the open market, speeds up growth in Laron syndrome patients.

It has also had an effect on noninsulin-dependent diabetics, "and there is hope that according to our new data, IGF-I will be accepted for this use and accepted as a drug The main risks for cardiovascular to extend the life of diabetes

Chief rabbi Lau receives invitation to visit Rwanda

By HAIM SHAPIRO

Rwandan President Pasteur Bizimungu has invited Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Yisrael Lau to visit his country. The invitation came after Lau last week expressed a desire for an international committee of spiritual leaders to help cope with human tracedies, such as in Rwanda, where thousands of refugees are starving to death on the border with Zaire. Bizimungu said Lau should come to Rwanda to organize such a committee. Lau made the suggestion to Cardinal Edward Cassidy, head of the Vatican Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews, who was visiting Israel to attend a sympsium on the future of Jewish-Catholic relations, organized by the Interreligious Coordinating Council in Israel.

The Rwandan president conveved the invitation via Jewish businessmen working in his country. One of the businessmen, Israel Weinstock, sent a cable to Lau indicating that Bizimungu intended to send an official invitation within a few weeks.

LOS ANGELES (AP) Elizabeth Taylor has been honored at a star-studded bash celebrating her 65th birthday and benefiting an AIDS foundation days before she was scheduled to undergo-brain surgery.

Actor Hugh Grant opened the show late Sunday night by introducing a retrospective of Miss Taylor's career and life.

"What a body of work — let's face it. What a body," the star of Four Weddings and a Funeral said, introducing the actress.

Miss Taylor, dressed in a green gown and coat, walked on stage and sat down beside her longtime pal, Michael Jackson.

Jackson, who escorted Miss Taylor along a riolet carpet into the theater, had written a song for her, Elizabeth. "Elizabeth, I love you, you're more than just a star to me," Jackson crooned.

Magician David Copperfield, Harry Connick Ir., Patti LaBelle, Rod Stewart, Kevin Bacon and the Bacon Brothers also were on hand to pay tribute.

Madonna, a surprise guest, gushed about how much she admired Miss Taylor's movie performances, especially A Place in February 27. Miss Taylor needs an operation to remove a benign brain tumor, the latest in a long series of health setbacks. Her surgery was originally planned for yesterday but was postponed for sometime this week because she still has lingering flu symptoms. No date has been set.

The tumor on the "lining of her left frontal lobe" was detected following an MRI brain scan during Miss Taylor's annual physical examination earlier this month. Her doctor expected a full recovcry without complications, spokeswoman Maria Pignataro said.

Miss Taylor had both hips replaced in recent years, then had to return for hip-adjustment surgery in October 1995 because one of the operations left her with one leg shorter than the other.

"I'm here to celebrate all of the people in the world with AIDS," Miss Taylor said. This function has enabled (her AIDS foundation) to go all over the world."
The audience was treated with never-before-seen footage of the actress's life and a career that began at age 9 and garnered best actress Academy Awards for Butterfield 8 and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The black-tie benefit, "Happy Birthday, car burning. The man was already dead." Politicians blamed the attack on the ETA -Basque Homeland and Freedom - which has killed 800 people in its 29-year drive for independence, four in the past week.

This could have caused a massacre because it was just a few meters from a school," said Carlos Iturgaiz, spokesman for the regional party of the ruling conservative Popular Party. The killing brings to four the oumber of victims ETA has claimed just this week in a sharp escalation of violence.

Gore draws veil over S.Africa row

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) - South Africa and the United States affirmed the strength of their relations yesterday, refusing to air in public a row over South African ties with Washington's list of "terrorist" states.

South African Deputy President Thaho Mbeki and US Vice-President Al Gore signed three accords after a meeting of their binational commission in Cape Town, the most important of them a treaty on double taxation.

Asked at a news conference if they had discussed public US objections to a proposed South African arms sale to Syria, Gore said: "Certain issues are best discussed in private." Mbeki added he was consulting various groups about the deal to provide Damascus with gun-aiming systems for its Soviet-supplied tanks but no final decision on the sale

His remarks were more restrained than those of Defense Minister Joe Modise, who said at the public unveiling of South Africa's Rooivalk (Kestrel) combat helicopter outside Pretoria vesterday that the country would sell arms to whomever it chose.

Modise dismissed criticism of arms sales to Syria as being colored by pro-Israeli bias and reaffirmed South Africa's friendship with Iran, another state regarded as a pariah by the United States. South Africa also has warm ties with Cuba and Libya. Gore said the binational commission, set up after apartheid was abolished with the bolding of democratic elections in April 1994, "enhanced the two-way exchange between the deputy president and myself on the full range of issues that our two countries have to deal with".

At the start of the meeting,

Mbeki said South Africa and the United States had "occasional disprogress experienced by the world agreements".

But because our relationship is based on common ideals and respect of each other's sovereignty, we are able to resolve these differences cordially," he said.

Last month the United States warned South Africa it would cut all aid if the Syrian deal went ahead.

US officials said yesterday the $600 million in aid originally offered for South Africa's first three years of transition was now in line to be extended to the year 2005. They gave no figures.

Gore said Washington was keen to cooperate with South Africa in boosting development throughout the continent.

"As we approach the 21st century, it is simply unacceptable to have a repetition of the overall pattern of the 20th century where as a whole...

"If the world is going to be able to find some way to empower this continent...then South Africa, as the most advanced oation on the continent, will play the key role in the march toward progress," Gore

Commerce Secretary US William Daley, one of five cabinet secretaries travelling with Gore, said the tax treaty signed yesterday replaced one scrapped 10 years ago under anti-apartheid sanctions.

This new treaty will facilitate increased flows of capital, goods and technology between the two countries as well as help lay the foundation for increased trade and investment that is critical to strengthening our important and growing commercial relationship," Daley said.

Zaire air attack kills six as UN seeks to halt war

By ARTHUR MALU-MALU

KINSHASA (Reuter) - Zaire's government yesterday rejected a cease-fire with rebels who have captured much of the country's east and launched air raids against a rebel-held town, killing at least six people an eyewitness in the town said.

The government stresses that it cannot accept a cease-fire with unidentified belligerents," Foreign Minister Kamanda wa Kamanda said in a statement issued just before he met UN special envoy Mohammed Sahnoun, who is trying to end the war.

At the same time, Zaire stepped up its counter-offensive against Tursi-led rebels who have made large territorial conquests since taking up arms last October.

An aid worker in the rebel headquarters of Goma said three government jets bombed the rebelheld east Zairean city of Bukavu just after 4.p.m.

Another aid worker, speaking by telephone from Bukavu, said loud explosions echoed through Bukavu and panic-stricken residents ran for cover.

"Bukavu has just been bombed...My staff and I are sheltering in the basement. We can see people running back and forth looking for shelter," he said.

An aid worker in Bukavu who said he counted the dead and wounded after the bombing raids at least six people were killed and some 20 wounded.

The government accuses the rebels of waging a proxy war for Rwanda, Burundi and Uganda which deny involvement. The statement implied Zaire could consider a truce with the neighboring states.

Any cease-fire with the regular armies of Uganda, Rwanda and Burundi must be linked to the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Zaire," the statement said.

Zaire used the occasion of the UN mission to hlame the world body for a threat by rebel leader Laurent Kabila to attack Tingi Tingi refugee camp near the city of Kisangani.

It said a statement by UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan last week that Zaire was arming exiled Hutu hardliners among some 200,000 camp dwellers gave rebels the pretext to threaten a raid. UN officials said they saw Zairean military supplies being "The Zaire government demands that the Security Council remove from Zairean territory all Rwandan refugees" including ex-Rwandan soldiers and their militia ian militias massacred up to 800,000 minority Tutsis and mod-erate Hums in 1994 before fleeing en masse into Zaire.

Hutu hardliners in refugee camps in Zaire plotted revenge attacks on the Tutsi-led government that later took power in Rwanda, stoking tensions in the region.

Meanwhile, Zaire's ethnic-Tutsis took up arms in October after local authorities said they would expel them to their ancestral homeland in Rwanda.

The rebels went on to seize vast tracts of borderland, putting Zaire's rag-tag army to flight and forcing the government to recruit foreign mercenaries for a counter-

Tajik warlord frees all hostages

DUSHANBE (AP) — A Tajik warlord yesterday released all six remaining hostages, five of them UN spokesman said.

The citizens of Nigeria, Russia, Switzerland, Tajikistan and Ukraine were freed at 6:15 p.m. Moscow time, spokesman Milos Strugar told the ITAR-Tass news agency.

The hostages were released after Tajik President Emomali Rakhmonov ventured into the mountains east of the capital yesterday to negotiate personally with the warlord and convince him to end the two-week-old standoff without bloodshed. Bakhram Sadirov, who had demanded direct talks with the president, sent two representatives and one of the hostages to meet Rakhmonov in a village near his base about 80 km east of the capital, Dushanbe. It was unclear whether Sadirov joined the talks. Rakhmonov was taking the former hostages with him back to Dushanbe, ITAR-Tass said. The warlord's spokesman telephoned Russian news agencies earlier yesterday and promised the bostages would be freed regardless of the outcome of the talks. A spokesman for the Tajik security ministry in Dushanbe said most of Sadirov's fighters moved deeper into the mountains yesterday in case they should come under attack during or after the bostage business leaders and celebrities to a $500-a-plate dinner in Havana next week to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the world-renowned Cohiba cigar, the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel reported yesterday.

Cigar diplomacy draws US celebs to Cuba

As most Americans are prohibited from travelling to the communist-ruled island under a longstanding US trade embargo.

FORT LAUDERDALE - Cuba Cuban officials are tight-lipped on who is on the guest list.

But published reports say movie stars Jack Nicholson, Danny de Vito, Matt Dillon and Arnold Schwarzenegger may be among those invited.

A box of 25 Cohiba cigars, known as Fidel Castro's personal favorite until the Cuban leader stopped smoking a few years ago, costs more than $800 in the United States, where Cuban cigars are banned.

The Cuban government will bold the dinner at Havana's famed Tropicana club on Feb. 28 to raise money for Cuba's health care system, the Sun-Sentinel reported. More than 600 guests throughout the world have been invited. "To someone who smokes cigars

Thousands block Serb state building

BELGRADE (AP) - Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic faced a new wave of protests yesterday, with economic demands replacing political ones at the top of the agenda. Transportation workers put the brakes on Belgrade's city buses, while teachers protested the government's attempt to quell their We've had enough. We are starving while the regime squanders money on the police force," said Sofija Siradovic, a 35-yearold high school literature teacher among the 5,000 who blocked a street in front of Setbla's main government building.

The three months of political protests have been suspended with Milosevic's decision to recognize opposition municipal election victories in Belgrade and 13 other cities and towns.

But the Serbian president has been left weaker than ever before. A wave of strikes and workers' protests could seriously challenge

Yet the victories have carried a bitter aftertaste for new local authorities faced with depleted city funds and skyrocketing unemployment. Serbia's economy has been decimated by years of mismanagement and international sanctions imposed to punish Milosevic for fomenting the wars in Croatia and Bosnia. Factories are at a standstill and already low salaries in all sectors of economic life often are delayed for mouths. In Kragujevac, a central Serbian s 200 non now controlled by the opposition, the once profitable car industry is in ruins. Kragujevac Mayor Veroljub Stevanovic said that the Zastava car factory's workers were poised for a strike if negotiations with foreign carmakers, including the French carmaker Pengeot, fail to get the factory working again. Workers in Kragujevac and elsewhere have largely stayed clear of the months-long political turnoil in Serbia, but could now increasingly stage their own protests. Teachers from 1,800 of 2,100 elementary and high schools in Serbia have been on strike for more than two weeks to demand back pay and an increase in their $150 average monthly salaries. Transportation workers also are demanding money owed them for the past several months, as well as better working conditions.

The teachers are angered by a deal Serbian Premier Mirko

Marjanovic struck with the statecontrolled teachers' union to raise their wages by 10 percent. The teachers, who originally demanded a 60 percent raise, said they were not properly represented during the negotiations.

"No one has a right to sign any kind of agreement on our behalf," said Jagos Bulatovic, a negotiator for the teachers. He said teachers would continue their protest today.

How low can we go?

sraelis are used to politics being a contact sport, but the efforts of former internal min-Lister Moshe Shahal to besmirch former police inspector-general Ya'acov Terner, sink to a new low. Such mudslinging by public officials, in turn, presents the media with the dilemma of bow to report allegations which may be defamatory, but are made by people so senior that they are difficult to ignore.

This weekend a story appeared in Ma'ariv by a former reporter for Yediot Aharonot, who claimed that his former newspaper suppressed a number of bis stories on public officials for unprofessional reasons. One of the quashed stories described was about an "extremely senior police officer" who allegedly courted a teenage girl working at an ice-cream parlor he frequented over a period of mooths. On Sunday, Sbahal told Haifa Radio that Terner was the police officer referred to in the Mo'ariv story.

Sbahal also said that he told then-prime minister Yitzhak Rabin and then-foreign minister Shimon Peres about the story, but decided not to inform the attorney-general. According to Sbahal, the three of them agreed to do nothing unless the story was published, at which point the case would be referred to the authorities. Sbahal now says be regrets not referring the matter to the attorney-general at the time.

The girl in question bas since called the allegations against Terner "libelous" and admitted to exaggerating Terner's interest in ber to tease her boyfriend. Terner himself says that be was never alone with the girl, and that when he took her on a tour of the Air Force Museum he first asked her mother's permission.

Yediot, for its part, explained that it bad decided not to run the story because it could not be sufficiently verified, and not for fear it would jeopardize its police sources, as Ma'oriv alleged. The girl's subsequent backing of Terner's version of the story vindicates its news judgment, said Yediot, and demonstrates what it called "the difference between a fair press and a yellow press."

Giveo the overlapping vendettas - betweeo Shahal and Terner and between Ma'ariv and Yediot, it may be difficult to ever discover the truth. But it's clear that the person wbo emerges looking the worst from the wbole episode

Asked why he chose to reveal that it was Terner who was the subject of the Ma'ariv allegations, Sbahal told Haifa Radio, "I kept the secret for three-and- a-half years. When I was asked who the officer was, I bad to answer directly, otherwise all senior police officers would be suspected of eating ice cream all the time." This response gets bigh marks for snide creativity, but it is no excuse for besmirching the name of a senior police official. If Shahal thought the allegations were true, he should bave urged the opening of an investigation at that time. For Shahal to level an accusation now, following an incidental mendon of the case in an article published essentially to further the rivalry between two tabloids, is the height of irresponsibility.

It was also irresponsible for Mo'ariv to publish a story that alleges scandalous activity by a number of public figures in an off-hand manner. While Terner was oot oamed, the Mo'oriv story did name a oumber of other public figures, but reported the allegations against them in a most cursory fashion.

If the allegations are as solidly based as Mo'ariv implies, they should be reported on individually, in a thorough and systematic fashion. If not, they should not be reported at all. The reputations of public figures should not be treated as playthings in a battle between rival newspapers.

There remains the question of the nature of Terner's relationship with the teenager. Given the girl's unreserved defense of Terner, there is oo reasoo to doubt, at this point, that he was only being friendly, and that the entire relationship was an innoceot one. Maybe it is naive to believe that any relationship between a young girl and an older man can be innoceot. But that possibility cannot be excluded, and we are obligated to relate to anyone accused of misconduct as innocent until proven guilty.

If Shahal's irresponsible accusation backfires on him, perhaps politicians will learn that even in politics there is limit to bow low one can" stoop when attacking a rival. The press, for its part, may not be able to ignore high-profile accusers, but it can do its best to discredit false accusations by seeking and revealing the truth.

A grotesque protrait

The headline-making "con-version for cash" scandal has spawned a long list of casualties.

If the allegations are true. numerous would-be converts to Judaism had their conversions accelerated and simplified in return for bribes of several thousand dollars each handed over to influential rabbis.

First, the converts themselves were cheated out of due process, and risk having their conversions recalled. Then the public was duped into accepting into the fold those who bad failed to meet the "eligibility requirements" of a 3,000-year-old tradition.

Thirdly, a seething populace has tarred honest and ethical rabbis with the same wide brush of cor-

Who will blame the overall community if it oow faults the Torah, and Jewish Law as it is commatively practiced, for having allowed this travesty to go on for so long? It just seems like another conclusive piece of evidence for those who have held all along that Judaism is outdated, immoral and bypocrisy-ridden.

STEWART WEISS

When people can point their finger at Jewish practice and declare, "This is the kind of dishonesty and lack of integrity the Torah embodies," then we have violated one of the most sacred of Jewish responsibilities.

If Jews in general are judged by a double standard, observant Jews are subjected to an - equally valid - double standard vis-a-vis the nonobservant Jewish community. Every action, every word, every nuance of behavior an Orthodox Jew exhibits is placed under the microscope. We are expected to be more moral, more ethical, more decent than the average.

The biggest victim of the 'conversion for cash' scandal is Judaism itself

And that is the way it should be. for we wear - or claim to wear the mantle of Torah; and that cloak mandates the sort of behavior that is entirely above suspicion and beyond condemnation.

THE conversion scandal isn't the only chink to appear lately in our ethical armor.

More and more, I'm seeing secular friends vent their anger over comments by certain religious figures to the effect that victims of the helicopter tragedy experienced "Divine retribution" for supposed sins.

Can any response be more odious, more anni-Jewish, more of a profanation?

Conversion with a price tag

Is there any figure in the reli-gious world today prepared to stand up and claim that he is a prophet so blessed with Divine. guidance that he can explain with arrogant certainty wby one person should die and another be saved?

When individuals presume to assume God's role, when they assign hlame here and culpability there, in places and for reasons only they deem valid, they poison the Jewish well giving forth the pure water of Torah.

Those of us engaged in a daily struggle to show the beauty and wisdom of the observant way of life to the unininated have been set back a thousandfold by the irresponsible and ill-informed words and actions of a few deviants who paint a grotesque portrait of Judaism.

It's sad and painful that one should need to spell it out. Bot this is what traditional Judaism is: It is a normal, compassionate, caring way of life, one that espouses clean hands, open bearts, and humility. It abhors corruption and bribery, and grants the benefit of the doubt to all its followers.

Most of all, it cherishes the sanctity of every Jew, whatever his or-her level of religious observance. It is time for the religious establishment, from the chief rabbis on down, to come out with a strong, clear and unequivocal response, serving notice to those who call themseives religious but act otherwise that profaning God's name under the cloak of observant Judaism will no longer be tolerated.

there's nothing wrong with opposing the idea of a unilateral withdrawal from Lebanon on military grounds or on political ones.

But it is quite unacceptable to claim that the issue must not even be raised because any debate only serves to demoralize our soldiers serving in southern

It's a strange line of argument almost like saying that if we believe too many of our soldiers are dying because the strategies of yesteryear may no longer constitute today's optimal policies, we ought to just shut up and let more soldiers die.

I am reminded of an argument l bad with someone about a year after the Six Day War. She said Israel should never withdraw from the territories occupied in June 1967 because withdrawing would imply that the over 700 Israelis killed in the war had died

I firmly believe that if the succession of wars Israel has successfully fought against its neighbors finally convinces those neighbors that Israel is indestrucrible and here to stay - and that they had better accommodate themselves to the reality - all those killed in these wars will not have died in vain.

At the same time, it should seem obvious that if people were killed doing something that seemed right at a given moment, that doesn't mean more people ought to be allowed to get killed at a different moment, just because our leaders are locked

THE SOURCE OF BUREAUCRACY

Sir, - I refer to the article "Sick and tired" by Ann Hutchings which appeared on February 4.

I think Ms. Hutchings should indeed return to the US, but try and return not as an American citizen. She should enter as many others do who bave the same sentiments she has, only about the US, not Israel. Has she ever gone through the bureaucracy in her own country? I suspect not. My family and I (all English-born) were in the US for two years with family there. We also were not allowed to work. We made the mistake of going for a two-hour trip over the border to Mexico for a sightseeing tour. We too were made to feel like criminals, only instead of Hamas, we were treated liked wetbacks from Mexico. We had to spend the whole of the next rwo days sitting around our local Immigration Office in Houston just in order to apologize for our short trip and consequent re-entry.

Yes, I definitely agree with Ms. Hutchings. Bureaucracy is a pain, out before she puts the blame so squarely onto the shoulders of srael, which is a habit common to he rest of the world, she should irst look at home. People who ive in glass houses shouldn't

Sir. - It is oot clear to the public at large whether in refusing to undergo a polygraph test, Elyakim Attorney-General Rubinstein is acting contrary to the law or to standard security recruitmeor procedure for senior civil servants and high-ranking officials. However, it is perfectly clear that, based on Ruhinstein's previous government service and especially his role as secretary to the cabinet, he must have been well aware of such law or procedure prior to accepting nomination to the position of attorney-general. Former Chief Justice Meir Shamgar was quoted in an article in the Post some ome ago as say-ing, "...the law is the law, you can-not pick and choose." If we assume Rubinstein subscribes to this dictum, it seems to me that it would have been more honorable of him to have declined the nomination wheo approached, on the grounds that he did not intend to take a lie-detector test and thus would not wish to be seen to be "bending" the law to his own con-

RELIGIOUS MINORITIES

Sir, - One of the highlights of my week is to buy the Friday Jerusalem Post and read Rabbi Shlomo Riskin's Shabbat Shalom column. I have always found the column to be insightful, informative and thought-provoking. I found his column "Convinced not coerced" (January 31) particularly so.

Given the situation today where the religious parties influence the coalitioo government, l have much to fear if these same parties were ever in a position to lead a coalition government.

enrol their child in a religious kindergarten, and undertake to send him to a religious school when he is older, the Orthodox rabbinical courts will convert him and he will be registered as a Jew in Israel's population register. (The implications are significant, because the child's religion will subsequently appear in his identi-ty card, which be will carry throughout his entire life.) If Yaron and Anna don't submit

Judaism teaches us to 'extend a hand to the convert.' But it can be more like a fist in the face to these coercive demands, their child will never enjoy full rights in Israel.

IT IS hardly surprising, therefore, that in light of the excessive requirements of the religious establishment, a number of unscrupulous Onhodox rabbis have taken advantage of the monopoly they enjoy by offering "quickie" conversions for financial reward.

It should be added that the conditions set by the Orthodox rabbinical courts are not those of Jewish Law; on the contrary. Halacha states categorically that the conversion of a minor is considered to be to his advantage (lizchuto) and that it should be conducted by the rabbinical court on his behalf, since he is not of an age to make the decision.

If Yaron and Anna convert their adopted child before bringing him into Israel, he will be considered Jewish under the Law of Return. So the couple will appear before a Reform rabbinical court in undergo circumcision and ritual immersion there.

But it is only a partial solution, because our Orthodox rabbinate, which holds a monopoly on marriage registration in Israel, will not recognize him as fully "kosher." Like tens of thousands of other Israelis, he will never be able to marry in Israel unless he lives a fully Orthodox Jewish life. This is a condition no liberal society has the right to impose upon its citizens. It's like telling them: "You are good enough to pay taxes, good enough to risk your lives in defending the country - but you have no right to marry here."

It is absurd that civil marriage through the agency of a non-Jewish official in Cyprus or Paraguay should have become the only option available to so many Israeli citizens. It's the price we pay for Orthodox control over religion resulting from coalition politics.

The present situation is not only a personal tragedy for Yaron and Anna. It is a disgrace for a democratic state, and an affront to a Judaism that teaches us to "extend a hand to the convert."

Present legislative attempts to extend the power of Orthodoxy in the field of conversion represent a further attack on civil liberties, seeking to deny the reality of a pluralistic Jewish society in which no one should have the right to claim a monopoly on Judaism.

Finally, Yaron and Anna are pseudonyms. In an Orwellian Jewish world in which rabbinical courts maintain computer files on those forbidden to marry, and in which converts appear disguised on TV for fear of having their conversions rescinded, their real names had to be concealed.

Capturing the essence of a soul

By ORA BRAFMAN

Batsheva presented four works to commemorate 10 years of Ohad Naharin's ties with Jiri Kylian and his dance company, NDT. What a treat it was.

The highlight of the evening was No Sleep Till Dawn of Day, a duet Kylian created in 1992 for two of his favorite dancers, Sahine Kupferberg and Martine Van Hamel of NDT 3 (a company composed of dancers aged over 40). Here it was danced by Adi Salant and Isabel Chaffoud of Batsheva who are half the age of the original cast, but they did justice to the work that treats maturity as an

Bulgarian fuel crisis looms

Bulgaria's interim government yesterday raised petrol prices by up to 178 perceot in a hid to free suppliers' volumes kept in storage, Prime Minister Stefan Sofianski said. "The new prices will be effective from today, and it is bigh time that the fuel, which suppliers hold back, appeared on the [domestic] market," Sofianski told a news conference. "We hope that the lev/dollar exchange rate will stabilize, despite the price rise. The crisis and the chaos are enormous."

On Friday the new interim government, which inherited crippling fuel and grain shortages, banned fuel exports until April 30 and troops enforced border controls in a hid to curb oil smuggling by companies and private motorists. A liter of petrol cost 10 cents on Friday based on a rate of 660 levs per dollar. The lev traded around 3,000 per dollar on Friday.

Dutch ban pig market

The Dutch Ministry for Agricultural Affairs said yesterday it had banned concentrating pigs in any one place throughout the whole country from today. "This implies that pigs from various companies are no longer allowed to be taken to export ceoters. All pig markets have been suspended," the ministry said in a statement. It added that the measure was necessary to reduce the risk of spreading the swine fever epidemic currently hitting the southern Netherlands. All transport bans which were imposed earlier remained valid.

Earlier yesterday, the Belgian authorities decided to slaughter 12,000 pigs to prevent the contagious disease from spreading to Belgium from the Netherlands. So far, 17 cases of swine fever have been discovered in the Netherlands. The Dutch farm ministry has ordered the slaughter of over 35,000 pigs in the areas which are affected.

VW seeks accelerated bribery probe

Volkswageo AG said yesterday it had asked German prosecutors to investigate growing bribery allegations tied to a major paint factory contract for its Czech Skoda unit awarded to Swiss-Swedish engineering groop ABB Asea Brown Boveri. VW said It filed the legal complaint on Friday to start the criminal probe into allegations that some VW workers demanded about DM 20 million in bribes from ABB in exchange for the DM 400m. plant expansion contract.

The request to prosecutors in Braunschweig came as Der Spiegel said a group of workers at VW and General Motors Corp for years have sought and received hundreds of millions of marks in bribes from several parts suppliers.

"We have not yet invited com-

The proposed amendment would make fundraising on the international market very difficult. IEC raised $600 million in a US bonds issue at the end of

Swiss back call for forum on Holocaust gold

ZURICH (Reuter) - British politicians seeking compensation for Holocaust survivors said yesterday they had won Switzerland's backing for a proposed conference of all countries that handled Nazi gold during World War II.

Two British members of par-

Labor MP Greville Janner, who is a vice-president of the World Jewish Congress and a critic of Swiss wartime gold purchases from Hitler's Germany, said Swiss backing was crucial for a international conference to be called.

"It could not work without the full cooperation of the Swiss, and we were delighted that Flavio Cotti said he thought it was an excellent idea and that he thought the Swiss would participate," he said from Beme after meeting

"We are now going to take this back to the British government and suggest that they get it mov-ing," said Janner, who met Cotti with Conservative member of parliament David Hunt and Labor European Parliament deputy Glyn

Swiss officials confirmed that Cotti had welcomed the idea.

Switzerland played a leading role among wartime neutral states in hnying Nazi German gold, much of it stolen from occupied countries. But other ocutral countries, such as Sweden and Portugal, also accepted gold from Hitler's central bank.

Janner said the proposal was for all countries that bought or handled Nazi gold to pool their knowledge on exactly how much was looted by Nazi Germany from occupied countries or from Holocaust victims and where that treasure ultimately went.

There are two objects. The first is to find the truth for its own

"The second is to coosider whether on the basis of the truth funds can be made available, first for the [Holocaust] survivors and their families and second to ensure that there is oever a future Holocaust," he added.

Much of the gold was collected after the war by the Western Allies - the US, Britain and France - and some remains in their vaults today, stockpiles that some Jewish groups have demanded be used to help impoverished Holocanst survivors and their families.

Unrest apparently eased in Iranian oil sector

By SHARIF IMAH-JOMEH

TEHRAN (Reuter) - Most oil workers who staged a protest at Iran's Oil Ministry on Sunday bave returned to work, while those arrested appeared to have been released, an employee at the National Iranian Oil Company said yesterday.

The workers told me they were back at their jobs and waiting for officials to issue a formal statement on actions they agreed to be taken on most of their demands," the employee who works at the NIOC offices in "A worker said police late last night [Sunday] started releasing those arrested and that he believed all had been freed, but be was not sure," he added. . Police in riot gear on Sunday arrested four or five busloads of oil workers from among 1,000 protesters from the NIOC-owned Tehran refinery demonstrating to press for higher wages and other demands, witnesses said. It was not immediately clear whether the protest had affected work at the refinery, Iran's third largest, with a capacity of 225,000 barrels per day (bpd).

The workers were protesting against the failure of officials to deliver on promises made last month to meet some of their demands for pay rises, food coupons and housing loans. They were also protesting against pressure put on their leaders to resign from their posts at the refinery's union, said the employee, who was not involved in the protest. The official Iranian news agency IRNA said on Sunday the workers ended their protest and returned to work after their representatives reached agreement with officials.

urged oil officials to accept the workers' demands and allow recognized unions free activity.

If we do this, then secret organizations will not arise and the [Islamic] revolutionary forces will express their demands in a more reasonable way," the prolabor daily said.

The newspaper warned workers not to allow themselves to be used by "enemies" and blasted foreign media for blowing the protest out of proportions.

Iranian officials in January denied reports of a strike at the 40,000 bpd Shiraz refinery after France's General Labor Confederation called on Iran to respond favorably to demands made by the employees at Shiraz, as well as at refineries in Tehran. Tabriz and Isfahan.

The Tehran refinery was also the site of a two-week long hunger strike by workers demanding wage increases in 1992, the first such action reported since purges in several industries following the 1979 Islamic revolution triggered tensions.

The 1992 protest ended after Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh met workers representatives and promised to look into their demands.

Iranian governments bave always been especially sensitive to protests by oil workers, who at crucial nimes have proved capable of stopping the flow of crude exports - which bring in the bulk of Iran's hard cash.

A strike late in 1978 by Iran's 100,000 oil workers shut down the industry and played a key role in the victory of the Islamic

French transport drivers strike for 12th day

By PENNY MACRAE

PARIS (Reuter) - French bank Societe Generale, renewing its attack on state aid to Credit Lyonnais, said yesterday it wanted the government to consider breaking up its rival and selling off most of its operations. Societe Generale bead Marc Vienot wrote to European Commissioner Karel Van Miert last month asking him to make the French government review "alternative solutions for the controlled liquidation and sale of blocks" of Credit Lyonnais, a bank spokesman said.

The commission must clear all state aid to the bank, still suffering from a heady expansion spree in the late 1980s, which backfired and led to massive losses. The government is hoping to privatize the bank as soon as possible.

Le Monde said the British bad also expressed concerns to the Commission about French state aid to the bank.

Societe spokesman said Vienot asked "for the sale of all its [Credit Lyonnais'] overseas activities... as well as its domestic operations such as investment management, consumer credit and perhaps a fraction of its retail network. But it's up to the shareholder [the state] to decide," the spokesman

Striking French transport drivers kick a soccer ball around a bus parking area in Nice, as a 12-day job action continues yes-

The NRP MKs intend boycotting tomorrow's plenum debate on the issue and instead will tour the areas where it wants construction to start. They will be joined on their trip by MKs from the Land of Israel Front, nicknamed "Force 17" by its chairman Michael Kleiner (Gesher).

Before a meeting of the new caucus yesterday, Kleiner told reporters "We will exercise our power against Bibi [Netanyahu]."

He then told the group: "Our presence on Har Homa is more important than our presence in the Knesset. There is pressure on Netanyahu and I hope this pressure will help make him fulfill his policy promises. The main problem is that 'tunnel trauma' which has grabbed and paralyzed Netanyahu."Herb Keinon adds:

As the controversy raged over whether to carry out already approved construction at Har Homa. Israel Radio reported that an additional 130 dunams of land at the site has been bought by Australian millionaire Joseph Gutnick.

Gutnick could not be reached last night for confirmation. But one source involved in land purchases in east Jerusalem said bis group of investors was once offered that particular piece of land, but did not take it.

Peace Now political secretary Mossy Raz, at the forefront of the fight against building at Har Homa, said he does not know anything about the purchase, but added that it is of only minor significance since Gutnick does not have permission to build on the

Springbok tests positive for banned substance

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) - A Springbok player has tested positive for the use of a banned substance, it was announced yesterday by the South African Rugby Football Union (SARFU).

A news release from SARFU refused to name the player, but a report on a South African radio station named Northern Transvaal lock forward Johan Ackermann as the player in question.

The player has asked for a second test of his sample, and SARFU will only take further action once the result is known, probably in 14 days. If the second test is positive, the player could face a ban of up to two years.

De Gianville suffers Lions rejection

LONDON (Reuter) - England captain Phil de Glanville and compatriots Tony Underwood and Jon Sleightholme have been left out of the initial 62-man British Lions training squad for this year's tour of South Africa.

Twenty-seveo Englishmen were named yesterday to attend a training session in Birmingham next month, with the final squad of 35 being announced on April 2.

But with de Glanville ignored and Will Carling unavailable, none of the three-quarter line involved in England's record 46-6 win over Ireland on Saturday have been chosen.

There are also six former rugby league players, headed by Scott Gibbs and Scott Quinnell who are among 13 Welshmen nominated. Thirteen Irishmen and a mere nine Scots complete the squad.

The captaincy issue remains unresolved, with increasing calls for a test skipper to be named only once the team has arrived in

According to newspaper reports yesterday, Besiktas spent £11,000 ($17,820) on hiring a plane to bring Amokachi back for the match with Fenerbahce after he missed a flight connection from London on his way back from Nigeria.

Besiktas fans at their home stadium cheered rapturously when told over the loudspeakers that Amokachi bad arrived half an hour before kick-off.

He put in an under-par performance in the match, which Besiktas, fourth in the Turkish first division and one place behind Fenerbahce, won 1-0.

Prosecution rejects Senna which he said occurred because the debris claim

BOLOGNA (Reuter) - An Italian public prosecutor yesterday dis-missed suggestions that debris on the Imola race track may have caused the death of Brazilian Formula One driver Ayrton Senna, Arisa news agency reported.

Prosecutor Maurizio Passarini who is leading investigations into the fatal crash at the 1994 San Marino Grand Prix, said he still believed that Senna's Williams team was to blame for the accident. The Sunday Times published a photograph at the weekend showing a small piece of debris in the path of Senna's car moments before it crashed into a wall. Passarini dismissed the paper's suggestion that the Brazilian might have died because he lost control of his Williams car after trying to avoid the unidentified fragment. "Even if the photograph is admitted, it won't change our opinion, which has indicated that the snapped steering column caused the accident," he was quoted as saying.

Frenchman Christophe Auguin sailed to victory yesterday in the dramatic Vendee Globe solo round-the-world-race marked by risky rescues and the disappearance of Canadian sailor Gerry Roufs. The disaster-prone 23,112-nautical mile race made headlines after three vessels, including that of Briton Tony Bullimore, capsized in remote Antarctic seas last January, stretching the Australian Navy rescue service to the limit. After 105 days and 20 hours alone on his 18-meter vessel Geodis, Auguin reached the western French resort of Les-Sables-d'Olonne at 0833 GMT, breaking the 109-day race record set in 1989 by another Frenchman, Titouan Lamazou. Dozens of yachts escorted Auguin, 37, as he crossed the finishing line for a 400,000-franc ($73,000) prize, and tens of thousands of cheering people lined the banks as he sailed slowly into port. Only seven of the 16 competitors are still in the race, which skirts southern Africa and rounds Antarctica clockwise towards Cape Horn in lonely, towering seas often peppered with icebergs.

Hapoel Jerusalem will he out to make history tonight in Istanbul when they take on Turkey's Fenerbahce in European Cup com-

Hapoel brings a 13-point advantage into the matchup which Jerusalem fans are hoping will be enough against the Turks. However, the 12,000 Turkish fans expected to fill the arena are sure to do their utmost to see that the lead coach Gadi Kedar's club so valiantly earned in Jerusalem simply disappears in Istanbul.

Jerusalem's 91-78 victory was achieved largely through the outstanding play of Hapoel's backcourt duo of Papi Turgeman and Adi Gordon. Turgeman in particular had success in posting up on his man under the basket, and also was hot from beyond the three-point stripe, finishing with 24 points. Gordon also hit some clutch baskets, and Jerusalem will again hope for a major contribution from the pair.

Meanwhile, Dan Bingenheimer will be expected to again put the body on Fenerbahce's big man, Dallas Comegys, and a team effort will be needed to stop Henry Turner, who is capable of scoring at will when he's got his game going. Jerusalem will also have to find

This week's Fact, Ilana Dayan's investigative documentary program, will be dedicated today to the Patriots, Israeli Druse who are loyal to the state but are made to feel as second-class citizens and are denied equal opportunities.

Ever since the establishment of the state, Druse have served in the army in combat units and have thrown their lot in with the Jews in what is called "The pact of blood".

Police to question Netanyahu today

By Jerusalem Post Staff

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is to be questioned today by police in the alleged "Bar-On for Hebron" affair. He will be asked to trace how Roni Bar-On's appointment as attorney-general came about and whether anyone pressured or threatened him regarding the appoint-

The investigation stems from the Channel 1 report several weeks ago that the Hebron redeployment agreement, if Bar-On was appointed attorney-general and arranged a plea bargain in his fraud

Investigators have prepared dozens of questions for the prime minister, and sources close to the investigation said the questioning could take hours and may even last more than one day.

Along with recalling the circumstances of Bar-On's nomination, Netanyahu will Shas MK Arych Den agreed to support be asked why the proposal to nominate lobbying for it, but there is apparently still sufficient evidence to support an indictattorney Dan Avi-Yitzhak as attorneygeneral was rejected, and Bar-On's nomination pursued instead. Avi-Yitzhak is representing Den in his ongoing fraud trial in Jerusalem District Court.

It will probably take several more weeks to complete the investigation due to the volume of evidence that must be reviewed, police sources said. Police have a general picture of the circumstances that led to the appointment and know who was no evidence to support the allegation made by Channel 1.

There is, however, evidence reportedly supporting suspicions that some of those involved in the affair committed fraud and breach of trust. Sources said Deri and others lobbied to bave Bar-On appointed, and had expressed at various times a desire to see Bar-On in the post so as to further their personal interests. It is still not clear, though, whether there is

Bar-On was questioned by police for several hours yesterday, the second time he has been questioned.

Israel Bar Association head Dror Hoter-Yishai was also questioned intensively on his involvement in the affair. Businessman David Appel, who has also been questioned, is said to have told police that Hoter-Yishai was the first to
